THE MUSEUM OF CONTEMPORARY ART, LOS ANGELES, PRESENTS
MATTHEW BARNEY: RIVER OF FUNDAMENT

BARNEY’S FIRST MAJOR MUSEUM EXHIBITION IN L.A. FEATURES FILM AND LARGE-SCALE SCULPTURE

September 13, 2015–January 18, 2016
The Geffen Contemporary at MOCA

LOS ANGELES—The Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles, presents Matthew Barney: RIVER OF FUNDAMENT, Barney’s first major solo museum exhibition in Los Angeles. River of Fundament (2014) is one of Barney’s most challenging and ambitious projects to date, and his largest filmic undertaking since the renowned, five-part CREMASTER film cycle (1994–2002). The eponymous exhibition comprises the epic-length, operatic film River of Fundament, which screens in a cinema made specifically for The Geffen Contemporary at MOCA, and approximately 85 works inspired by or made in conjunction with the film, including large-scale sculptures weighing up to 25 tons, drawings, and vitrines.

Nearly seven years in the making, the film River of Fundament tells a story of regeneration and rebirth inspired by Ancient Evenings (1983), Norman Mailer’s sprawling, provocative novel set in ancient Egypt.
Conceived as a nontraditional opera written in collaboration with composer Jonathan Bepler, the film combines documentary footage of live performances mounted by Barney and Bepler in Los Angeles, Detroit, and New York, with scripted scenes filmed in a recreation of Mailer’s Brooklyn home and in a subterranean river of feces. Over three feature-length acts, the imagined character of Norman Mailer appears as a protagonist in different incarnations, including one portrayed by Mailer’s son, John Buffalo. In a parallel narrative, three American automobiles are transmogrified. The film features a notable and diverse cast, including actors Maggie Gyllenhaal, Paul Giamatti, Elaine Stritch, Ellen Burstyn, Aimee Mullins, and Joan La Barbara.

The film is divided into three acts, each featuring a live performance (REN, KHU, and BA) that advances the narrative of a commercial and industrial society via the American automobile manufacturing industry. REN (Los Angeles, 2008) subjects the 1967 Chrysler Crown Imperial from Barney’s CREMASTER 3 (2002) to mechanized destruction in an automobile showroom. KHU (Detroit, 2010) documents a performative casting of the massive sculpture DJED (2009-11), during which 25 tons of molten iron is poured into an open, molded pit at a derelict steel mill. BA (New York, 2013) takes place at locations along New York City’s East River, culminating in a battle at a dry dock in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, a large basin used for the construction and repair of ships. From the dried up L.A. River, to the Detroit River, and finally to New York City’s East River—host to a funereal barge ferrying the Mailer apartment set—man-made and natural arteries transport the protagonists on their journeys from death to rebirth.

Matthew Barney: RIVER OF FUNDAMENT continues the program Barney has developed over the last seven years, in which a complex storytelling system, intertwining personal, historical, and modern mythologies, generates narrative sculpture. With this project, Barney moves away from his signature materials of thermal plastic and petroleum jelly towards iron, bronze, lead, copper, brass, and zinc, metals that evoke both ancient sculpture and automobile manufacture. For instance, Canopic Chest (2009-11) refers to the jars that ancient Egyptians used during mummification to store their viscer for the afterlife; and Sacrificial Anode (2011) takes its name from a type of highly active metal used to protect other metals from corrosion. The forms of these sculptures are based on the ancient Egyptian was scepter, a royal staff and symbol of power cast in precious metals.

The exhibition includes a new group of sculptures made specifically for the MOCA presentation and on view for the first time. Barney made the sculptures in his Water Castings series (2015) using a process he has developed over the past year. Molten bronze, poured into an open pit filled with a silt of water and clay, reacts immediately with the explosive expansion of the water. The bronze displaces the water and fills the random recesses in the clay to create a form that would be impossible to cast or model by hand. The exhibition also includes a suite of new drawings, storyboards, and vitrines that intricately map the character and thematic development of River of Fundament. In his drawings, Barney continues to explore unorthodox, highly symbolic substances and materials such as gold, silver, lapis lazuli, and sulfur.

The film River of Fundament premiered at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in February 2014, and had its European premiere at the Bavarian State Opera, Munich, in conjunction with the opening of Barney’s eponymous exhibition at Haus der Kunst. River of Fundament screened at Royce Hall on April 25, 2015, presented by the Center for the Art of Performance at UCLA, for its Los Angeles premiere in advance of the presentation at MOCA.

Guggenheim Museum, New York, and traveled to Museum Ludwig, Cologne, and the Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris.
