LOS ANGELES—Last month, The Museum of Contemporary Art (MOCA) launched limited-production, artist-designed face masks in response to the COVID-19 safety and health guidelines. MOCA Masks uphold the museum's commitment to making the experience of art accessible and encourage the urgency of contemporary expression, with sales benefiting the museum and MOCA's youth programs. MOCA youth programs make education more collaborative, inclusive, and learner-centered, and nurtures intellectual growth through transformative experiences with contemporary art. Now four of the nine participating artists' designs are being offered in kid size, including artwork by Virgil Abloh, Alex Israel, Catherine Opie, and Andy Warhol. The complete MOCA Masks collection is designed by Mark Grotjahn, Barbara Kruger, Yoko Ono, Pipilotti Rist, and Hank Willis Thomas, in addition to the kids' MOCA Masks artists. Many of the masks were exclusively designed by the artists for this project while others represent iconic works from the artists' catalogue.

The regular size masks retail at $28 USD and the kid size masks retail at $20 USD each. Both are now available online starting today via the MOCA Store: moca.org/masks. The MOCA Masks project is made possible by Los Angeles-based denim brand Citizens of Humanity and MOCA Trustee Karyn Kohl who have donated all production costs so MOCA will benefit from each sale*.

All masks are crafted in Los Angeles and vary in fabric depending on the design. This mask shape fits a wide range of kids (under 10) faces comfortably. Masks are designed for comfort with soft elastic ear loops and ease of wear without sacrificing on safety. Made with two layers of fabric, featuring a pocket on the inside with open sides, customers can insert their own filter for extra protection.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

Virgil Abloh, “Still Speaks Loudly” (@virgilabloh)

Virgil Abloh (b. 1980, Rockford, Illinois) is an artist, architect, engineer, creative director, and fashion designer. After earning a degree in Civil Engineering from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, he completed a Master's degree in Architecture at the Illinois Institute of Technology. It was here that he learned not only about design principles but also crafted the principles of his art practice. He studied a curriculum devised by Mies van der Rohe, on a campus he designed. Currently, he is the Chief Creative Director and founder of Off-White™ and the Artistic Director of Menswear at Louis Vuitton.

Mark Grotjahn, Untitled (Creamsicle Covid 19) (@markgrotjahn)

Mark Grotjahn (b. 1968, Pasadena, California) combines gesture and geometry with abstraction and figuration in visually dynamic paintings, sculptures, and works on paper. Each of his series reflects a range of art-historical influences and unfolds in almost obsessive permutations. He received a BFA from the University of Colorado at Boulder and an MFA from the University of California at Berkeley. Throughout his work, by finding variations within his immediately identifiable style, Grotjahn reveals the complexities of authorial gesture.

Alex Israel, Mask for MOCA (@alexisrael and @infrathinofficial)

Alex Israel (b. 1982, Los Angeles, California) For the last decade, Israel's art has embraced pop-culture as a global language. Trafficking in the invisible stardust of Hollywood and the detritus of film production—backdrops, sets and props—while riding the wave of the Internet and social media—as online talk-show host, eyewear and clothing designer, filmmaker and hologram—Israel's art practice doubles as a brand, centered around a Southern Californian millennial lifestyle for which his iconic profile-in-shades-logo becomes a sly emblem, mobilized across high-visibility platforms from the worlds of art, entertainment, fashion and tech. Embedded within each of Israel's endeavors is not only a landscape (of LA) and a portrait (of himself), but a cool and savvy meditation on a world fueled by celebrity, product placement and influence. A sort of sphinx behind dark lenses, the artist provokes an interrogation of the role of contemporary art in this new world.

Barbara Kruger, Untitled (Better Safe Than Sorry)

Barbara Kruger (b. 1945, Newark, New Jersey) is an artist who works with pictures and words in the hopes of revealing and resisting socially ingrained assumptions about power: how it determines who lives and who dies, who is healed and who is housed, who speaks and who is silenced, who is visible and who is marginalized.

Yoko Ono, A Piece of Sky (@yokoono)

Yoko Ono (b. 1933, Tokyo, Japan) is a multi-media artist working in performance, instruction, film, installation, sculpture, music, and writing. A forerunner in conceptual art involving collaboration, audience participation, and social activism since the early 1960s, Ono challenges viewers' understanding of art and the world around them. Her influence spans many of the key artistic movements of the late 20th century including Fluxus, conceptual art, video art, and feminism. In addition to her work as a visual artist, Ono is also a musical pioneer, both an accomplished singer and songwriter.

Catherine Opie, Bo from Being and Having (detail) (@csopie)

Catherine Opie (b. 1961, Sandusky, Ohio) is one of the preeminent artists of her generation working with photography. She earned a BFA from SFAI in 1985 and an MFA from CalArts in 1988. Her work is held in over 50 major collections throughout the world. She is the recipient of numerous awards, including The Guggenheim Fellowship, The Smithsonian's Archives of American Art Medal and a United States Artists Fellowship. She is the Lynda and Stewart Resnick endowed Chair in Art and Professor of Photography at UCLA.

Pipilotti Rist, Smart Yuji (@pipilotti_rist_studio)

Pipilotti Rist (b. 1962, Rheintal, Switzerland) is a multimedia artist. She studied graphic design, illustration and photography at the Institute of Applied Arts in Vienna, as well as audiovisual communications and video at the School of Design in Basel. Rist is a pioneering video artist, she developed an aesthetic that takes its cues from television, advertising, and feminist video work. From her earliest tapes through her recent multi-media installations, Rist's body of work explores the intersection of sexuality, technology, and pop culture.

Hank Willis Thomas, Life, Handle with Care (@hankwillisthomas)

Hank Willis Thomas (b. 1976, Plainfield, New Jersey) is a conceptual artist working primarily with themes related to perspective, identity, commodity, media, and popular culture. Thomas' work addresses the visual systems that perpetuate inequality and bias in bold, skillfully crafted works. Through photographs, sculpture, video, and collaborative public art projects, he invites you to consider the role of popular culture in instituting discrimination and how art can raise critical awareness in the ongoing struggle for social justice and civil rights.

Andy Warhol, Flowers (@warholfoundation)

As the preeminent American artist of the 20th century, Andy Warhol challenged the world to see art differently. Since its founding in 1987, in accordance with Warhol's will, The Andy Warhol Foundation has established itself among the leading funders of contemporary art in the United States. The Foundation has distributed over $200,000,000 in cash grants which support the contemporary visual arts, particularly work that is experimental, under-recognized or challenging in nature. *The Foundation will share a small portion of the proceeds from the funds of each sale which shall contribute to the Foundation's endowment from which these grants are distributed.
